

A municipal employment experiment to begin in 2021

The aim of Helsinki's employment services is for unemployed jobseekers to find work and training opportunities more efficiently and to develop new solutions for finding skilled labour.

A brief introduction

The municipal employment experiment will see almost 50,000 jobseekers transfer from the TE Services to Helsinki's employment services. This change will take place on 1 March 2021, and with it roughly 250 employees and facilities in Itäkeskus and Pasila will also be transferred from the TE Services to Helsinki.

What is the municipal employment experiment?

What does the municipal employment experiment mean?

The municipal employment experiment is a national 2.5-year-long project where some of the statutory employment services are transferred from the TE Services to municipalities. A total of 125 municipalities and 26 test areas formed by these municipalities are taking part in the experiment. Helsinki forms one of these test areas on its own, and the other test areas within the Metropolitan Area include Espoo and Vantaa-Kerava.

Why is the experiment taking place?

The purpose of the municipal experiment is to increase the effectiveness of the employment services and the range of jobseeker services, and to improve the overall customer experience. The aim is to achieve this by making the services provided by municipalities easier to access, and to improve the effectiveness by combining the state and municipal staff resources, funding and facilities in managing unemployment.

Will this affect me?

The municipal experiment and service transfer to the City of Helsinki will most likely affect you too, if you live in Helsinki, are an unemployed jobseeker or taking part in an employment service, and if one of the following applies to you:

- you are under 30
or
- you are a foreign-language speaker, i.e. your first language is not Finnish or
- you are not entitled to earnings-related unemployment allowance and instead receive labour market subsidy, social assistance or sickness allowance from Kela.

The TE Services will send you a letter and a notification via their E-Services if you are included in the experiment.

How will the change affect me?

When will the experiment take place?

The municipal experiment will take place from 1 March 2021 to 30 June 2023.

Will this change affect my unemployment benefits?

No, the change will not affect any unemployment benefits that have already been granted to you.

At the start of the experiment, after you have become a client of Helsinki's employment services, the labour policy statement made by the TE Services to either Kela or your unemployment fund (whichever pays your unemployment benefits) will remain in effect. The municipal experiment will have no effect on how Kela or your unemployment fund processes your unemployment benefits. The change should also not have a notable impact on how long your unemployment benefit application and granting process takes at Kela or your unemployment fund.

During the early days of the change, the City's service may experience some bottlenecks when it comes to processing new decisions. Therefore, you should avoid things that require a decision or approval during the transition phase, if at all possible.

What do I need to do because of this change?

As a jobseeker, you do not need to do anything because of the change.

Your existing employment plans and other plans will remain in effect. The employment services in your experiment area, which in Helsinki's case mean Helsinki's employment services, will contact every jobseeker as soon as new experts have been appointed to them. When this is done, we will also send you more information about Helsinki's employment services and your clientship.

Will I continue to have a specific expert assigned to me? Will my appointed expert change?

In the future, nearly all jobseeker clients will have their own appointed experts to help them.

However, you will likely be appointed a new expert when the City takes over the services. You will be appointed a new expert as quickly as possible after the transfer. You will be notified about your expert by post and via the E-Services as soon as one has been appointed to you. You will also be notified if your expert does not change.

You can expect to hear more about your appointed expert from Helsinki's employment services.

Will this somehow limit my access to services?

Once the municipal experiment has begun, you will only be able to use the employment services of your official home municipality.

For example: A person whose home is in Helsinki but who lives closer to Vantaa's TE Services than Helsinki's TE Services previously used the services in Vantaa. However, during the municipal experiment, Vantaa's TE Services will no longer be able to serve the person.

Jobseekers who are clients of the experiment will only be able to use their home municipality's employment services.

Will there be any changes to my services?

As a municipal experiment client, you will receive the same services as you did from the TE Services before. Small changes to the City of Helsinki's services are possible, because the number of clients will increase significantly.

During the experiment, we will develop new services and solutions to promote employment and will also work more closely together with the social, healthcare and education services, amongst others, in order to achieve this. This means that the number of services available to you may rise during the experiment.

I am a TYP client. Is my service going to change?

No, you will continue to receive the same TYP service (cross-sectoral joint service promoting employment), but it will be organised differently during the experiment. This may mean that your usual office or the expert appointed to you will change.

The Act on Multisectoral Joint Services Promoting Employment will not change, and during the experiment we will be calling these services rehabilitative services that promote employment.

Which languages will the services be available in?

Services will always be available in Finnish and Swedish, and most of the time in English too without any special arrangements or an appointment.

Interpreters will be arranged where needed to access the services, similarly to with the TE Services.

Where can I access services?

Where can I find services if I become a client of Helsinki's employment services? What about during the transition?

You can continue to use the TE Services' E-Services online, the same as before.

You can also continue to get employment services from the TE Services' customer service number by calling 0295 025 500 (Mon–Fri 9–16:15)

By calling this number, you can get help with accessing the services, using the online E-Services and in matters connected to employment. If necessary, you will also be directed to other services that are suitable for you.

Once the municipal employment experiment starts in early 2021, you can receive face-to-face service at the following locations:

- Asiakkaankatu 3 in Itäkeskus
- Ratapihantie 7 in Pasila
- Ohjaamo for those under 30 years old at Fredrikinkatu 48 in Kamppi.

Services are also available at Viipurinkatu 2 and Runeberginkatu 5 for clients with appointments.

Face-to-face customer services during the pandemic will be provided if and when possible.
